ANOTHER PHASE OF THE GOVERNOR'S RACE.

A few days ago Prof. Henry Whitfield made a speech in Panola County in which he was attempting to show his "Peculiar Fitness" for the office of Governor. As in other speeches about over the state, he succeeded in bringing out his peculiar fitness but as we see it he is demonstrating that he is more peculiarly fitted for some other position than that of Governor of Mississippi at this critical time.

That Mr. Whitfield is high-toned, honest and a clean man morally is not questioned. But there are several other men in the race for this office about whom this can be just as truthfully stated.

It is surprising that Prof. Whitfield should attempt to boost himself as a business man at the expense of Mr. Conner, and still more surprising that he is charging that Conner is responsible for the high tax rate that has come about since the last Legislature began, when everybody knows that, by his actions and public utterances made when he became a candidate for Governor, the Professor belongs to that class of men that believe that the larger the expenditure of public money and the more bonds that are issued, the more certain we are of "Progress"—that is a certain kind of progress.

While Mr. Whitfield has been charging Mr. Conner responsible for the appopriations of the last Legislature and in his speech says that Mr. Conner is unfair in charging him with having benefitted by the appropriaton, on the grounds that he kept his own salary from being raised, the facts are that Mr. Conner has not charged that Mr. Whitfield was benefitted personally one cent. Mr. Conner has not charged that Mr. Whitfield asked for one cent increase for himself. While the Professor has been making these charges on Conner, he must have forgotten that in his last request of the Legislature before his retirement from the Mississippi State College for Women, and while Mr. Conner was presiding as Speaker, too, that he asked for $282,000 in improvements and that he also asked for $94,185.04 more for salaries which was $368,210.04 over the previous year. We are not saying that he asked for too much nor for too little for the needs of the school. But he asked the Legislature for this additional amount and he got what he asked for. In order that the money might be available, it became a part of the increased and high rate of taxes about which he is complaining. Now since he is wanting to be Governor he is criticising Conner, who happened to be Speaker of the House that gave him what he went down to Jackson and asked them for. It reminds us of the little boy who, when he gets caught, wants to take it all back.

But times have changed. The Professor is now a candidate and wants to become Governor. He is now complaining of high taxes along with the rest of us. He is now advocating a lower tax burden without prescribing a definite means of relief. Let's go back and see how he stood and what he said about taxes before his over zealous friends got him into this political pond, where he has never been swimming before. He made an utterance of which there is a record just a short time after the last session of the Legislature adjourned and it is evident that he must have been referring to conditions at that time. This utterance was made before the Jackson Chamber of Commerce, at Jackson, Miss., the following report was carried in the Commercial Appeal of April 12, 1922, and in other papers:

Mr. Henry Whitfield of Columbus responded to the address of welcome. He paid his respects to the man who makes high taxes the burden of his wail against life, and his own failure, and said that for himself he liked the things that cause high taxes, good schools, good roads, good men in positions of trust. He pointed out the fact that there is a country where inhabitants are not burdened, and recommended that persons who do not desire to live with the things which necessitate a high tax rate can all migrate to the jungles of Africa."

In looking at the record that he is holding as president of one of the State's greatest educational institutions and upon the efficient business administration of which he is basing his chief claim for the office of Governor, let's see if it is all his. He does not seem to give the board of trustees of this college much credit for business management, whether it be good or bad. When the Legislature established this college it also created a board of trustees to keep a line on how the money was spent—that is to direct how the money shall be applied and to make contracts for whatever work was to be done at the college. This body, so far as we have been able to learn, has been doing what it was created to do.

We would not detract one laurel from the brow of Mr. Whitfield as a school man. If we were going to pick a man for the administration of a college we know of no one that would get more favorable consideration at our hands than Mr. Whitfield. It is a work that he is familiar with and is better equipped to do than any other man in the race for Governor.

The duties of the Governor of Mississippi in direction of the affairs of the state government is a great business matter. Such also are the duties of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States. It was an ex-college president, Secretary of the Treasury Houston, who put on the deflation of the country's currency in 1920, which brought such havoc to millions of business men and enterprises and same near bankrupting the whole nation. Mr. Houston was appealed to to stop the deflation, but he did not have the business judgment to see the disaster that would come by what he was doing. He was impractical. We believe Mr. Houston was sincere and honest. But by his act he did the farmers and every other class an immediate injury. We here in Mississippi know that we are still struggling to overcome this act of deflation which originated in the mind of an ex-college president. There is no higher work done than that of our teachers in Mississippi but the country generally regards men who have spent the greater part of their lives in school work as being impractical in other lines and unfitted for great business matters.

We need in the Governor's office a man to direct the great business of our State, a man who is not only honest and clean morally, but who is known to be practical, familiar with every phase of our State government, and that we know can do the job. Mike Conner is the man who has these qualities. He is the man for the place. He is the man of the hour—Batesville Panolian.

GRENADA MASONS CELEBRATE ST. JOHN'S DAY MONDAY

Luncheon at Lodge Rooms. A Number of Visitors. Hon. Webber Wilson Makes Address. His Theme, "Faith and Charity. A Fine Appeal for Brotherly Love and More of Extending a Helping Word to an Erring Brother.

Ancient, Free and Accepted Masonry was at its best in Grenada Monday afternoon and that night in the celebration of the birth and life of an immortal whose life means so much to Masonry, that of Saint John, the Evangelist.

Invitations were sent to a number of neighboring Masons and as a result there were a goodly number of the craft from other towns who added to the fellowship and spirit of love and charity which are known to be among the cardinal tenets of free masonry.

The craft was ordered to assemble at the Masonic hall at 6:30 o'clock where a delightful luncheon consisting of broiled spring chicken, Brunswick stew and other edibles had been elegantly prepared. The guest of honor, Hon. Webber Wilson of Laurel, arrived several hours before the luncheon and had been taken in charge by old acquaintances and warm personal friends. Several short addresses were made during the serving of the luncheon. After partaking of the luncheon, all repaired to the court house where Mr. Wilson delivered an address thoroughly in keeping with Masonry and befitting the occasion. He was very happily presented by ex-Mayor W. S. P. Doty.

Mr. Wilson took as his theme, "Faith and Charity." He dwelt particularly on charity which he stated he regarded as one of the sublimest virtues. He reminded his Masonic brothers that he thought the worst indictment against Masonry was that of failing to exercise charity towards the faults of other Masons. Too much, he said, it was with Masons like those outside of the lodge, "Oh, have you heard that Mr. So and So has been seen to where he should have kept away from; or that Miss So and So is not behaving right and she ought to be run out of town."

He drew a picture of a woman of reputed bad character in a community and of what men were saying about her. Then he pictured the young woman clad in silks and wearing gorgeous diamonds passing by and what she said to her friends and associates about this "terrible woman." Nobody even lending the poor creature a helping hand or saying a soothing word. The cry was, "put her out of town." At this juncture Mr. Wilson observed that he had little patience with a community that wanted to shift its undesirables off on some one else. He said that he thought it was absolutely wrong in courts and judges to suspend sentences on people arraigned and convicted provided they would get out of the community.

The speaker then contrasted the attitude of the Savior and that of men and women towards the fallen woman. He said the same thing would happen today if the Savior should appear, and if His kingly voice should say, "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone," there would hardly be any man to cast the first stone. He stated that he was by nature an optimist but those who failed or refused to recognize dark and ominous things on the horizon of the whole land were, like [illegible], sticking their heads in the sand. His plea was for Masons to wake up and show the spirit that George Washington did and those associated with him in founding this government. He stated that he was proud of the fact that a majority of the signers of the Declaration of Independence were Masons. But he said that there was but little in simply just "being a Mason."

Mr. Wilson indicated that he thought there was a sort of looseness in social circles that men and women were just refusing to see, and that these things particularly needed the attention of the Masonic fraternity if the home in all its beauty and integrity was to be perpetuated as it had been given over to those of the present day.

He said the ominous things on the horizon was that there were so many who seemed to take a delight in abusing the government. He said he would but look with some degree of skepticism on the man who could see but little good in his country. His plea, he said, was an awakened public conscience and a revival of that patriotism that made the American flag a symbol of liberty the world over. He said, too, that that man or that government that left God out of his calculations was doomed to a horrible fate. He said that the governments of the world which had perished, perished because they left God out.

He referred to a trip he made to Washington City and the fruition of a hope that was born in his breast when a mere child to go up in the great Washington monument. He said that a friend reminded him as he stood up there 550 feet above the surface of the earth and looked down on the Potomac river and the sights of the city of the center of civilization that on top of that grand monument were these two words, Laus Deus, praise God. Would, he said, that every son of America, more especially every Mason, would realize that he should live the thought, "Praise God."

He mentioned a visit to Chattanooga and his going upon historic Lookout Mountain where as he stood there among the clouds and looked down through the tree tops and across at the creeks and branches as they gathered together and finally made one beautiful river, and then he said he thought how like those streams and the river was this great country made up of so many people born under the providence of God and designed for a noble and holy purpose. He pleaded for men to realize what God had for them to do.

Mr. Wilson's address was indeed a sermon. It was an appeal to the highest and noblest in men. It mirrored much of the Sermon on the Mount and the compassion and love of Jesus before his hearers. It served to still further stamp him as a profound thinker and as an orator second to but few men of his age.

PROFESSOR WHITFIELD REVERSES HIMSELF.

Man would be more than human if he did not on occasions make mistakes. But, having made a mistake, the honorable thing to do is to confess the error and try to make amends. Children are taught, or should be taught, the roundation of all success in life is based on honesty. Certainly we have a right to expect to find this virtue in a citizen who aspires to the highest position in the gift of the people of the great Commonwealth of Mississippi. Last week more than a hundred citizens of this county heard Professor Henry Whitfield deliver an address in support of his candidacy for governor. The chief topic discussed by Mr. Whitfield was taxation. He pointed out the crisis that is at hand as though he had made an important discovery. Every citizen of this county knows full well there was nothing to discover in the matter. We have been for the past four years laboring under a strain caused by taxation that has about wrecked us. Professor Whitfield said there were twenty dollars derived from the lumber industry for every dollar produced by agriculture. Mississippi's agricultural production last year was one hundred and thirty millions of dollars. At that rate the lumber industry of the state must have produced more than two and one-half billion dollars. That is twice as much as the total industry of the entire United States for 1922. Now we submit a man who aspires to the position of governor, especially one who has been on the State's payroll for twenty odd years, as one of its leading educators, should know more about the State's affairs than the above would indicate Professor Whitfield knows. But this is not the most important matter brought out by Prof. Whitfield's speech here. During the course of his speech he was interrupted by the gentleman who introduced him with a request for an explanation of the statement that Prof. Whitfield had advocated high taxes in a speech at Jackson in the spring of 1922. Quoting from last week's Democrat (a report which was declared correct by Prof. Whitfield's supporters) he said:

"The speech alluded to was made in Jackson when he was delivering a welcome address. He was at that time referring to the dreadful condition of Mississippi's finances and said, 'if we issue any more bonds we would all have to go to Africa.'"

There are a number of things to bear in mind in connection with this speech. Only a little time before this there had been a gathering of citizens in Jackson to protest the continued exhorbitant taxation and woeful waste on the part of state officials. Three citizens attended from this county. When we arrived at Jackson we found an atmosphere which was distinctly hostile to our purpose. We also found the heads of every state educational institution there asking for increased appropriations. The writer heard one veteran legislator say, "our school heads must have very little to do for they spend the entire time of the legislative session here in Jackson lobbying for more money." Prof. Whitfield was not at that time connected with a state institution, but he was in Jackson on that business—evidently the habit of twenty years was too well fixed to be thrown off. While in Jackson on that business he was called on to speak at a Chamber of Commerce banquet. Remember the further fact that the City of Jackson is the beneficiary of high taxes and the larger the appropriation, the more money spent in Jackson, hence the citizens of Jackson are for high state taxes—it means money in their pockets. Prof. Whitfield was chosen to speak because he represented their ideas and ideals. In the course of his speech he was referring to the citizens who had gathered at Jackson in a desperate effort to put a stop to waste and to lower taxation if possible. In the course of his speech Prof. Whitfield said:

"He paid his respects to the man who makes high taxes the burden of his wail against life and his own failure, and said that for himself he liked the things that cause high taxes, good schools, good roads, good men in positions of trust. He pointed out the fact that there is a country where the inhabitants are not so burdened and recommended that persons who desire to live without the things that necessitates a high tax rate, all migrate to the jungles of Africa. He closed by saying that there exists no real cause for discouragement in Mississippi, because, with its problems, it has the finest Anglo-Saxon population in the world, and that by working unselfishly and unpolitically with the material that the State has in abundance, the present state of depression can be quickly passed."

Now this is the exact quotation taken from the report of the Commercial Appeal reporter under date of April 12th, the day following his speech. Contrast what he said in Jackson of April, 1922, with what he said when asked about it at the Tate County Court House in June of 1923. Of course in 1922 he was in Jackson in an effort to get bigger appropriations; in 1923 he is a candidate for Governor and knows he can not be elected on such a platform.

We would think more of Mr. Whitfield if he would come clean with the goods and admit he has been a high tax advocate and now wants to do what he can to undo the harm he has done. An honest confession would meet with the approval of the people of this State but a flat denial of what he actually did say, a repudiation of the truth as he knew it in 1922, to further his own selfish interest for Governor now, will scarcely meet with the approval of our people who want actual relief from the present oppressive condition of taxes. Mr. Whitfield has made a sad mistake. Honesty is always the best policy. It will be a foolish man indeed who will take seriously the statements of a man whose life's record is the direct opposite of what he now advocates. Look over the State and see who Prof. Whitfield's supporters are. Take a peep at a certain active influence in Tate County. Think about this matter for just a moment and then confess to yourself that if Mr. Whitfield is in favor of tax reform he is being supported by the queerest following you ever saw. Isn't it a fact?

Talk is mighty cheap. Anybody—even Bilbo—can stand before an audience and say nice things and paint pictures of what he can do. BUT A MAN'S PAST RECORD MUST NOW BE HIS EARNEST OF THE FUTURE. We have nothing else to go on. To make a mistake now will be disastrous. We must be mighty careful. The editor of The Democrat has no other motive than the best interest of our people. We appeal to you to study this thing carefully. Be not deceived by gilded words or flowery promises. Look deep and get the truth. Your homes may depend upon it.

ELECTION FOR STREET PAVING TO BE HELD SATURDAY, JUNE 30

To Determine Whether or Not Obligations Shall be Issued to an Amount Not Exceeding Sixty Thousand Dollars for Paving. Advocates Say Issue Will Carry. Those Opposed Say Not.

Tomorrow, Saturday, June 30th, is the day fixed by the Mayor and Board of Aldermen of the City of Grenada when the taxpayers of the city shall, by their ballots, determine whether or not obligations of the municipality to an amount not exceeding sixty thousand dollars shall be issued for the purpose of paving certain streets in the town. The paving question has long been on the minds of the people of Grenada and the matter has been agitated by some for years. It is now up to the taxpayers for the final say. Those who are strongly advocating the paving say that the election will go for the issue by a large majority; others opposed to the paving on account of the increase in tax rate which will necessarily follow are of the opinion that the "noes" will have it and that there will be no paving done in Grenada in the near future.

The question to be submitted is as follows:

"Shall the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Grenada, Mississippi, be authorized to issue paving certificates of said city to an amount not exceeding sixty thousand dollars, exclusive of obligations issued against special assessments, for the purpose of raising funds to pave the intersections of the following respective portions of the following streets and the city's share of curbing, guttering, storm sewering and paving said respective portions of said streets and any and all other expenses which the city may be called upon to bear as its portion of such special improvements on said respective portions of said streets, or such parts thereof as may be so specially improved, namely: (a) Green street, from Spring street to the wood block paving on the Public Square, (b) Main street, from Spring street to the wood block paving on the Public Square, (c) Main street, from Second street to the southern end of Main street, the paving on this street to be forty feet wide, being twenty feet on each side of the center thereof, (d) Line street from north end of intersection of Line and Main streets to Old Middleton Road, (e) Second street from the I. C. R. R. crossing to Line street, (f) Doak street, from Depot street to south end of Doak street and Line street from South street to Margin street, (g) South street from Water street to Line street, the paving on this street to be thirty feet wide, being fifteen feet on each side of the center thereof, (h) Margin street from Commerce street to Line street, and (i) Harvey street from Main street to College street, all in the City of Grenada, Mississippi, as provided by resolution passed by the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of said city at its regular June, 1923, meeting?"

POLITICAL GOSSIP FILTERED OUT FROM CAPITAL

All Candidates Claiming but the Better Guessers Place Conner in the Lead. The Few Who Live in Town of the Russell - Bilbo Faction Are for Franklin but Those "Back in the Woods" Said to be for Bilbo.

Jackson, Miss., June 27.—The political pot is beginning to boil. As people gather here for one purpose and another from different parts of the State, one who listens can get the angle of thought of different localities about as well as such a thing is possible.

Of course the greater interest is in the governor's race. These five men are shelling the woods, each proclaiming that he is well versed in what Mississippi needs and that he and he alone is the one to apply the remedies. The people have heard much of this sort of matter before and this time are picking up the bottle which contains the remedy prescribed and are trying to understand its contents as never before. It is surprising at what calmness pervades the State about politics.

All the candidates are making claims. They have to do that. If a man does not believe in his own election, who will? It takes inspiration and hope of success to carry people along.

The best "figurers" agree that Conner is gaining more votes than any other candidate and there seems to be much to justify the claim, and if one is to believe half of what he hears, Conner will undoubtedly be in the second primary. Some say with Whitfield, others with Bilbo, others with Franklin.

Whitfield had a conference with his friends in Jackson Monday. They were here from different parts of the State and showed quite a deal of enthusiasm. A statement was promulgated which many say is too long to be effective. Others say that the statement is school-teacher like and deals in generalities; still others say that the words "psychological" and "environment" are wanting in the paper and therefore it is in that respect lacking in the marks of a modern educator. The friends of some of the other candidates say that Whitfield and his friends realize that he is weakening and that the meeting was called in the hope, if possible, to

SECOND LAP OF $2,000 GOLD DISTRIBUTION IS DRAWING TO A CLOSE

Five Hundred Dollars to be Awarded Saturday, July 7, to Twenty-five Different People... Twenty-eight Firms Participating to Make Gifts Possible. Many Tickets Have Been Lost.

The second lap of the $2,000 gold distribution, which is an event of importance in Grenada and surrounding territory this year, is nearing its close. The second distribution will take place in the public square on Saturday afternoon, July 7, when twenty-five more persons will become beneficiaries of the cash awards. Five hundred dollars will be given away on that date, the highest gift being one hundred dollars in gold and the lowest being five dollars.

The first distribution took place on Saturday, April 7th, when like amounts were given to as many people who were so fortunate as to hold the numbers entitling them to gifts.

Twenty-eight Grenada business firms are participating to make the distribution possible and every buyer in the Grenada territory should familiarize himself with their names, which appear elsewhere in this issue of The Sentinel, and go there to make his purchases. One ticket is given with every dollar cash purchase or payment on account and any one of the tickets may mean that the holder will receive as high as one hundred dollars in gold.

Many of the numbers have been lost or misplaced by the holders, but in case of a gift being uncalled for, a new number will be posted and the holder thereof will be the recipient of th amount the ticket calls for.

Two more distributions, one n October 6th and the other on Christmas Eve will be made before the close and tickets received now are good until the last awards are made. All holders of numbers should keep them until the final day as no one knows what numbers are going to be the fortunate ones.

THREE COTTON BLOOMS

It was noted in The Sentinel of last week that a cotton bloom had been sent in from the farm of J. R. Moreland of near Philip. Monday of this week, June 25, Lake Brooks brought in a bloom and on Tuesday Eugene Staten, the 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Staten of Oxberry was here to place his cotton bloom in evidence.

Mr. W. A. Mayo from district 4 brought in a bloom Wednesday.

LESSON FOR JULY 1

JOHN, THE BAPTIST

(May be used with temperance applications.)

LESSON TEXT—Luke 3:3-8; 7:24-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—"He shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink"—Luke 1:15.

REFERENCE MATERIAL — Matt. 3:1-17; 11:2-15; Mal. 3:1-6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Baby, John.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Man Who Prepared the Way for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Herald of the Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Character and Work of John, the Baptist.

John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was not only great in the Lord's sight, but was great when measured by the standards of men. In the teaching of this lesson a survey should be made of John's life and work.

I. Birth and Ministry Foretold (Matt. 3:3; cf. Isa. 40:3).

He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger. His life was a plan of God. He was said to be a man sent from God (John 1:6). There is a sense in which every life is planned—everyone is sent from God. Everyone should remember that God has something to do with his life.

II. His Character.

1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation. His supreme concern was to proclaim the Christ. He did not make himself prominent—was only a voice calling upon people to prepare for the Messiah. His person and habits were a protest against the luxury and hypocritical formality of his time.

2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd. He even denounced the religious leaders of his time and demanded of them fruits worthy of repentance.

III. His Preaching (Luke 3:3-8).

1. Demanded Repentance (vv. 3-6) Suddenly emerging from his seclusion he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent in preparation for the coming of the Messiah.

2. Demanded Proofs of Penitence (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false religions be abandoned—their sinful hearts renovated—showed them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. A change of mind, that is, the turning of the soul from sin to God, was necessary. This is a preparation which must be made before one can see and experience the salvation of God.

IV. Jesus' Testimony to John (Luke 7:24-28). Because John did not see the interval between the "sufferings of Christ" and the "glory that should follow" he was perplexed. Therefore he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. The prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and His second coming. The two events were so presented as to appear to be in close succession. John in his preaching has stressed the mighty judgments which should take place at the appearance of the Messiah. The turn things were taking (he himself being imprisoned with the gloomy prospect of death), was in great contrast to the coming of the Messiah in fiery judgment—"the ax is laid unto the root of the trees" and "the chaff is burned up with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:10, 12). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not lack of faith, but confusion of mind that prompted his inquiry. Christ's testimony defended him against any such an accusation. Christ vindicated him against a vacillating mind because of the storms of persecution. He was not like a reed shaken by the wind (v. 24). He had lived a life of self-denial, therefore he did not deny his faith in Christ because of the dungeon (v. 25). Jesus declared that no greater prophet had arisen. That which perplexed John was the delay in judgment—the day of God's patience while gathering out the Church. This was a truth not disclosed to the prophets—that which Paul made known—because a special revelation had been granted (Eph. 3:3).

V. The Martyrdom of John (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not mince matters even with the king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death. He sealed his testimony with his blood.

Seeking the Name of God.

The Turks carefully collect every scrap of paper that comes in their way, because the name of God may be written thereon.—Richter.

Men of Genius.

Men of genius are often dull and inert in society; as the blazing meteor, when it descends to earth, is only a stone.—Longfellow.

Prosperity and Adversity.

He that swells in prosperity will be sure to shrink in adversity.—Colton.

LESSON FOR JULY 8

MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 1:26-38, 46-56; 2:1-20, 41-52; John 19:25-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Thou shalt call His name Jesus; for He shall save His people from their sins."—Matt. 1:21.

REFERENCE MATERIAL — Matt. 1:18-2:12; John 2:1-11; John 19:25-27.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Mary and the Baby, Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Mary and the Boy, Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Notable Incidents in the Life of Mary.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

I. Mary at Nazareth (Luke 1:26-38, 46-56).

Mary was a Jewish maid of the town of Nazareth. The first information we have of her is that she was engaged to be married to Joseph, a carpenter of the same village. It seems that the custom among the Jews was for betrothal to take place a year before marriage. During this interval the woman remained with her parents.

Gabriel Sent from God to Mary (vv. 26-38). It was during this interval of betrothal before Joseph and Mary were married that God sent the angel Gabriel to announce unto Mary that she was to be the mother of Jesus. Isaiah, more than 700 years before, prophesied that a virgin should give birth to a son whose name should be called Immanuel (Isa. 7:14). Though at first perplexed, she accepted the annunciation with remarkable courage and devotion. To be told that she was to be a mother was nothing startling, for this was the normal desire of every married Jewish woman. Under the circumstances she accepted motherhood at a tremendous cost. She was conscious of her virgin purity. She knew that to become a mother under such circumstances would expose her to unutterable suspicion and shame. This was the view that certain Jews took of the matter, for they insinuated to Jesus that He was born of fornication (John 8:41). Her faith was such that she responded with noble courage. She said, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word" (Luke 1:38).

2. Her Wonderful Song (vv. 46-56). In her embarrassment she set out on a visit to an elderly kinswoman named Elizabeth. Having sought the sympathy and encouragement of this friend, her triumphant faith carried her beyond the misunderstanding, the scorn and shame which awaited her, and caused her soul to burst out in this most wonderful song of praise.

II. Mary at Bethlehem (Luke 2:1-20).

What Gabriel announced to Mary was now being fulfilled. Caesar's decree concerning taxation brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem at the opportune time for the fulfillment of Micah 5:2. Because of the crowded condition of the inn, the birth of the world's Saviour took place in a cave-stable.

III. Mary in Jerusalem and Galilee (Luke 2:41-52).

Jesus, now at the age of twelve, was a child of the law, for at this age the child took his responsibility as a worshiper.

1. Failure in Vigilant Care (v. 43). They had left the city and gone a whole day's journey without knowing where the child was.

2. Failure to Understand Fully Jesus' Action and Words (v. 50). No particular censure should attach to this, as it is beyond our ability even now to understand all these things.

3. Failure to Properly Sympathize with Jesus' Deepest Longings and Emotions. "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

4. Failure to Perceive Her Limit of Masterfulness. The time comes when duty to God takes precedence over duty to parents. All these limitations should be viewed with the background of her deep devotion to God. Her whole life was lived in a spiritual atmosphere. She was just the kind of woman to whom God would trust the upbringing of His Son. Jesus went back with them to Nazareth and was subject unto them.

IV. Mary at the Cross (John 19:25-27).

This was a great trial. For any mother to see her son die is a trial, but what must it have been for this mother in the face of all the sacred memories that clung to her soul? It is beautiful to note the tender care which Jesus in His dying hour manifested for His mother. He committed her to the care of John. John accepted the responsibility of a son and took her to his home.

BACKACHES NOW IN THE DISCARDS

Mrs. Cummins Declares Stella Vitas Relieved Her Sufferings

"Before taking Stella Vitae my back hurt so I thought it would nearly kill me, but now that backache is in the discard and I can't tell you how happy I feel," recently said Mrs. Jebbie Cummins, a resident of Marks, Miss.

"About six years ago I was taken with a backache that just stayed with me night and day. I got so weak and run down that I couldn't stay on my feet to do my work. My nerves were all torn to tatters and the least thing would make me shake and tremble like I had a chill.

"After taking Stella Vitae I feel like a new woman. I am now the happy mother of three children and can't praise Stella Vitae enough for getting me over my troubles."

Stella Vitae may be obtained from any druggist and the purchase price will be refunded if it fails to bring relief. Adv.

BERNHART-BILLUPS.

On last Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Billups in Grenada, Mr. Paul Bernhart made Miss Charles Billups his bride, Rev. Melville Johnson of the Methodist church saying the ceremony.

Mr. Bernhart is a son of Mr. J. D. Bernhart and was reared about ten miles southwest of Grenada. He comes of a good and a substantial family and learned those lessons at the family fireside so essential to making upright men, good citizens and devoted husbands.

Mrs. Bernhart, too, comes from a home where the sublimest things of life are enthroned. She is a lovely young woman. She is beautiful in person and gracious and lovely of character and has a radiant disposition and an intelligent mind. She will grace any home and her husband may well congratulate himself that he has won a great prize.

There were but a few close friends besides immediate relatives present, among them being Mrs. Anna Cooley and Miss Laura Dubard of Charleston and Miss Fannie Sue Sabin of LeFlore. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Barclay Lewis of Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernhart will make their home at Earle, Ark., where Mr. Bernhart is engaged with a compress company.

The Sentinel extends congratulations and best wishes.

THEY ARE SICK AND TIRED OF IT

The people of Mississippi are sick and tired of the bitter spirit of factionalism which has permeated the politics in this State for years. They have been surfeited with the petty jealousies and petty ambitions of peanut politicians, and they have got enough of it.

Mississippi has been cursed by this sad state of affairs; it has hurt the State. is has retarded the commonwealth at every turn in its efforts at progress and development.

But, despite this feeling of resentment of factionalism on the part of the great mass of the people there are a few politicians in the State who are doing everything within their power to inject the old, and dead and gone issues into the present fight—purely the issues of factionalism, and bitter personal abuse and villification which characterized that period of the State's political history which the people are trying to get away from, and which they intend to get away from in August.

We verily believe that the present campaign is going to sound the deathknell to factionalism in Mississippi; that there is going to be no so-called line-up vote; that the people are going to the polls and vote for the man for Governor who is best equipped to discharge the high duties of the office of chief esecutive; the man of outstanding executive experience; the man who measures up to all of the qualifications of a statesman; the man of ripe and mature judgment; the clean and honest and dependable man; the man in whom Mississippians have confidence; that man whose integrity and honesty is unimpeachable.

That's what the people of Mississippi are going to do on August 7, the first primary date. They are going to lay aside the previous differences which grew up out of bitter strfe and factionalism and vote for the best interests of the people of Mississippi.

Despite this feeling and sentiment in the State, our good friend, O. F. Lawrence, editor of The Grenada Sentinel, is throwing all of the influence of his splendid paper into an effort to stir up and revive the old flame of factionalism. He is waving the red flag, and yelling "fight, fight, fight!" It is a destructive policy rather than constructive; it contains nothing to the promotion of a spirit of better feeling among our peple.

Here is a line or two from one of Editor Lawrence's editorials, commending Conner for the part he is playing in the revival of factionalism: "Go to it, Mike. You can't get the iron too hot or apply the brand too often for us. We enjoy seeing 'em walk in hot ashes. Take the hides off of them." We don't believe the people of Mississippi will approve or applaud the injection of this kind of spirit into the present campaign for Governor.

You may say, "you have to fight fire with fire." But that's all bunk. The thing to do is to fight fire with water—one of nature's most potent elements; the water of constructive leadership; the water of ability and fitness for public service; the spirit of harmony and concerted action in an honest and sincere effort to improve conditions and to lead Mississippi forward to her rightful place and destiny in the sisterhood of states. Steam comes from water and steam does constructive things in this world. Let's have more water and less fire.

Yes, the trouble with Mississippi today is that too many people are talking and writing who ought to be listening. A lot of mealy-mouthed politicians and demagogues have been going up and down the State sowing seeds of discord and strife, and Mississippi has reaped a harvest of unrest and discontent, and now the people are going to take a hand in things, and they are going to be thorough with all this kind of business.

A new day is dawning in the political history of Mississippi. The people are ready for it. It is reflected in the overwhelming sentiment for Whitfield in every county in the commonwealth. He has pitched a campaign on a high plane. He is waging a clean fight, free from the bitterness of factionalism, mud-slinging and personal abuse and villification. He is appealing to the people for their suffrage on the basis of his fitness for the high office to which he aspires. Present and past administrations are not factors in the present campaign. The people are looking to the future, and thank God, there is hope and a better day in sight.

People of all shades of political thought in Mississippi are flocking to the Whitfield standard, centering on him as the man who will lead the State on to higher and better things. —Commercial Dispatch.

COMMITTEE ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS THAT PROTECT FUTURE

The editor of The Woman Voter had her first experience in really official service for the Democratic party Tuesday when she sat with the State Democratic Executive Committee at its meeting in Jackson as the holder of the proxy of one of the members who was unable to be present.

We were honored with a place on the committee on resolutions which prepared and reported the regulations for holding the primaries in August. We are sure that we were not named on this committee because of any peculiar talent we had for the task. We feel that our appointment was more of a compliment to the women of Mississippi who are coming to the rescue of the Christian ministry and the best and most thoughtful manhood of the State who have set their hearts to redeem our commonwealth from the slush and mire into which it has been dragged during the past eight years.

The Woman Voter knows that the women of Mississippi appreciate the naming of Mrs. Lizzie George Henderson to a vacancy on the committee. Mrs. Henderson is a daughter of the immortal J. Z. George, and is capable, ready and willing to give unstintedly of her time and of her talents to bringing about a political house-cleaning in Mississippi. The committee paid a compliment to the womanhood of the State in naming Mrs. Henderson. She is the third woman named by the present committee to a vacancy, the two others being Mrs. Howard Williams of Hattiesburg and Miss Katherine Carothers of Como.

The Woman Vot desires to give its unqualified approval to the regulations adopted by the committee. We do not see how the committee could have done other than it did as to the regulations requiring the payment of poll tax as a requisite to vote.

Section 243 of the Constitution of the State IMPOSES a tax of $2 on each and every citizen over 21 years of age and up to 60 years. This poll tax by the same section is placed in the common school fund. We can hardly see how any thinking man or woman can want to participate in electing officers when he or she has been so careless of his or her obligations and so unmindful of the education of the children of all classes and so disregardful of public duty as to fail to attend to this important matter.

The women want no consideration not shown men in this matter. The women are standing for law enforcement. That is our safety. That is our refuge. All this twaddle about "letting down the bars to accommodate the women" is really a reflection on the women, and the Woman Voter resents it for them.

The only way to have clean men in office in Mississippi is to have clean elections. Clean elections cannot be had unless the law is followed.

We know that one of the prime purposes for adopting the present State Constitution was to secure and maintain white supremacy. The wise brains who wrote the Constitution very wisely wrote into that great document that the tax dodger and transient citizen should have no part in naming those who are to administer our laws. Of course, accidents and fate sometimes bring good citizens to where they share the same fate with the irresponsible citizen, but it is better to deny one good citizen a ballot than to let ninety-nine vote upon whom the cares of State rest lightly. We need to have better law-enforcement in Mississippi. We need it throughout the land. We need to have greater respect for constituted authority, and we think the Executive Committee is to be highly commended for doing its plain duty.

We enjoyed the experience of meeting with the committee. We were most favorably impressed with the sincerity and patriotism of the different members. They impressed us with being zealous to plant the feet of the Democratic party upon higher ground. We were also impressed with the determination of the committee to see that the primary election in the different counties is conducted according to the regulations adopted, and if perchance the election authorities in any county should fail or refuse to follow the regulations, we believe that somebody will have to give the committee the reasons why.—The Woman Voter.

CHAPTER XV.

Casey Town.

The man named Keith called to Sandy Bourke, who, for the moment, still stood alone, now rolling a cigarette.

"You-all talkin' to me?" he inquired mildly.

"I would like to know," said Keith in a manner which he appeared struggling to invest with humor, "exactly what is the idea of this theatrical, moving-picture episode? You were ready to shoot Plimsoll?"

"I was ready. I didn't figger there was goin' to be much shootin'."

"It looks to me as if you've driven the man out of camp and, as I've come all the way from New York to do business with him, driven the last two hundred miles in this car, I'd be obliged if you would tell me just what was the matter, Mr.—?"

"Bourke. Sandy Bourke."

The stranger had managed to muffle down his chagrin and resentment at the outcome of his trip. Keith was an adept at adapting himself to his environment.

"Sorry to have upset things fo' you," went on Sandy, "but this was a personal matteh between myse'f an' Plimsoll that had to be settled pronto an' permanent. I don't reckon how you've lost a heap, said Plimsoll bein' a crook."

"My name's Keith, Wilson Keith," said the other. "I'm a mining promoter. Plimsoll had agreed to sell me his interest in certain claims which showed well in assay reports. They alone were insufficient to interest me. When he wired me the news of the general strike, the prospect of development opened and I came on. You seem to have blocked the deal. However, I suppose Plimsoll can be located later. Have you any idea where he might be found?"

"It w'udn't do you one mite of good," said Sandy. "Plimsoll didn't own those claims. Didn't have an interest in 'em. Tried to jump 'em, an' did the jumpin' himse'f. I heard some eastern folk had been samplin' ore an' I saw some signs up on the Casey claims. Those are the claims Plimsoll tried to sell you, I reckon, for cash, figgerin' on the deal goin' through quick. He 'lowed he'd grubstaked Casey, which was a plumb lie. Plimsoll's got nothin' to prove his end. From now on he won't try to. The claims belong to Molly Casey, the same bein' my legal ward."

"Ah!" Wilson Keith's eyes grew keen and cold. "Have you any interest in them yourself, Mr. Bourke?"

"Me an' my two partners of the Three Star ranch own one-half interest, equal with Molly," said Sandy easily. His eyes matched those of the promoter and held them for a second or two.

The thought passed through Keith's mind that Sandy's interest, and that of his partners, might have been obtained from the girl under false pretenses, but he was very far from a fool and, among the things he saw in Sandy's eyes, it was clearly written that here was a man who was both absolutely fearless and absolutely honest. He had not seen many such.

"I'll be glad to talk with you later," he said. "Just now I'm ravenous. Any place to eat? And does the camp get up early or just go to bed late?"

The remark raised a laugh in the crowd, now milling good-naturedly about the machine.

Sandy recommended Simpson's and pointed it out. Keith, the man with him, his secretary, and the chauffeur, got out and walked stiff-legged to their coffee.

Sandy introduced Sam as his partner, Westlake as a mining engineer and assayer. Keith gave Westlake a shrewd appraising glance, and a nod.

"I'm too sleepy myse'f to talk business," said Sandy. "My two pardners are in the same boat. So, if you-all want to look oveh the camp ag'in, Mr. Keith, an' talk business with any one you find awake an' willin' I'll prob'bly see you befo' nightfall. You know where the claims are."

Keith stood for a moment in the door of Simpson's, looking after Sandy.

"A fairly slick article, the man with the two guns, Blake," he said to his secretary. "But he's straight."

"And mighty hard to bend," added Blake with a yawn.

"There were only a few old-timers in the crowd, Blake," said Keith. "A heap of people hear of a gold rush and think it's always a Tom Tiddler's ground, like washing out the rich sands of Nome. They'll be glad to sell and take shares for cash."

"Ought to change the name of the camp," suggested Blake. "Dynamite is known as an exploded prospect."

"Thought of that," said Keith. "How about Casey Town, after the original discoverer, who always believed in the place, but lacked the money for development and wouldn't take in a partner? Picturesque and good stuff for the prospectuses. You might send off some stuff about that, Blake, work in this Sandy Bourke and Plimsoll affair. Good, lively publicity stuff, we can use again later on. Romance of Casey's daughter. Wonder where she is?"

He lapsed into silence, swallowing his coffee in gulps.

Sandy and his companions found Mormon asleep on the Bailey claims. Miranda brewed coffee, and they told her the news of Plimsoll and the arrival of Keith.

"It's too bad you didn't run Plimsoll out of the county, or the state," remarked the spinster. "If that man Keith wants to buy my claims I'm willin' to sell. Milkin' is more in my line than minin', I've decided."

"Let's hold a pow-wow before we turn in," said Sandy. "Westlake, what do you know about Keith? Anything?"

"I've heard of him. I imagine he started out as a promoter rather than a developer. He has made some lucky strikes. There is no doubt but that he can float this proposition on a large scale, induce others to put money into it. He'll put the camp on a working basis. If the gold's here that will be a sound one. There is no doubt in my mind that Patrick Casey picked the best side of the gulch. The indications are in sight there. I would say sell these for cash, holding out on price until Keith refuses to offer more. He'll come back for a final bid. But let him organize with your claims. Those claims are the big bet of this camp, and he knows it."

"Fifty-one per cent, an' the name's Molly Casey, then," said Sandy. "What's more, you're to be consulting engineer or whatever they call the fat job, Westlake. I'm dawg tired. Sam, let's shack over to our claims."

Sandy, Sam and Mormon returned to the Three Star with the papers drawn and signed and the shares of stock issued that gave 26 per cent of the Molly property to her and 25 to the three partners. Keith returned to New York with his 49 per cent to weave his plans for the full development of the claims he had acquired.

He had the capital and was willing to put it into developing the Molly mine if necessary, but it was a business principle of his never to use his own money when he could get hold of someone else's. He had turned his eyes toward oil of late, scenting quick turns, and this took money. His wife took more; his son, just out of college, took all he could get.

Mrs. Keith, he decided, should look Molly up at her school, take her into the Keith home on vacations, introduce her into the social whirl. The right newspaper men would see her, meet her, get the story from Blake of her romantic childhood, with photographs of the Western Heiress in the Park on Horseback. Moreover, she could be introduced to the right people, that was Mrs. Keith's end of it.

Then would come the prospectuses with these extracts of the best paragraphs, tied up with views of Casey Town, with engineers' reports, with semi-scientific stuff about sylvanite, a masterpiece of romance and fiction, peppered with fact. The whole to be titled White Gold.

Blake submitted his clever campaign, worthy of better things, and Keith approved of it. That the partners of the Three Star as fifty-one per cent owners, of Molly Casey herself with them, should be consulted or informed, never entered his head.

Blake's campaign was carried out most successfully. Mrs. Keith descended overwhelmingly upon Molly at her school, chauffeur and footman on the driving seat of her luxurious sedan; gasped a little when she saw that Molly was a beauty, could be made an unusual one with the right dressing, the right setting.

Her brain, which was keen enough in business matters, told her that she could improve her husband's program of using Molly as an attraction to bring investors to the Keith residence. It might be a good thing—Mrs. Keith was quick at dealing with the future—if her son, Donald, fell in love with Molly, the heiress. She wrote to the Three Star ranch, to Sandy Bourke, guardian of Molly Casey, without Molly's knowledge. Sandy read the letter aloud to his partners.

"Dear Mr. Bourke:

"I feel that I should write this letter to you although I have never met you, rather than my husband, since the question is one that a woman can handle better than a man—that only a woman can understand and appreciate.

"I have seen your Molly and she has entirely captivated me. She is really wonderful, with wonderful possibilities. I want to take her into my home, Mr. Bourke. I think she feels the need of the companionship and advice of an older woman, rather than that of the girls at the school.

STILL ANOTHER COTTON BLOOM

On another page in this issue mention is made of three cotton blooms. Another bloom was brught in Wednesday afternoon by Mr. H. T. Calhoun. It was picked from the crop of a good colored tenant, Bonie Jones, one of Mr. Calhoun's farms which is a part of the old A. L. Bridgers farm. On the six inch cotton limb Mr. Calhoun brought in, there were five large, well developed squares. Mr. Calhoun is one of the best farmers in all the country and his tenants are usually among the most forward in their communities.

Still another cotton bloom was sent in Thursday morning by Mr. Guy James.

Old Man Gloom is going to bid Grenada goodbye on July 2. He is going to stay away for a week.

Which is by way of announcing the fact that the greatest of all gloom chasers—the W. I. Swain Show Company—featuring drama, vaudeville and musical comedy, is coming, and when W. I. Swain comes around Old Man Joy sits on the throne while Old Man Gloom makes himself scarce.

Under a big waterproof tent with seats enough for a whole town, local amusement lovers will see some of the classiest dramatic vaudeville and musical comedy productions ever produced here—comedy that will make tears of laughter roll down your cheeks, musical selections that will make you wonder how Swain can possibly do it all for those popular prices that he charges.

On the 1923 trip Swain is leaving smiles, happiness and joy in his wake. People are flocking as never before to see the high class performances that nightly add to the fame of the veteran showman who has such a peculiar gift for knowing what people want, and the knack of giving them just that.

DODGE BROTHERS RETAIL DELIVERIES BREAKING ALL RECORDS

Number of Cars Delivered to Customers in Excess of Any Similar Previous Period.

Since January 1st, Dodge Brothers dealers have consistently broken all previous records for delivery of cars to customers. Since April 1st deliveries to customers have averaged more than 5,000 cars per week. This is without taking into account sales in foreign countries. Materially increased production in 1923 has made this performance possible.

For the first quarter in 1923 retail deliveries to customers were in excess of any quarter in the history of the business—even including the peak periods of 1919-1920. Following this, deliveries for April exceeded any previous month of the first quarter and delivery figures for each week in April exceeded the totals of the preceding week—each week creating a new high record. May maintained the pace established in April. June should be better than May.

Dodge Brothers are able to compile this sales information because of the co-operation of each of their dealers throughout the entire United States and Canada in sending in a weekly report of all retail deliveries made to customers. Through these reports they have an accurate, detailed record of exact conditions existing in each sales territory. Their calculations are based on the number of cars actually consumed by the public, as they believe this to be the only true indication of conditions.

The constantly climbing delivery records coupled with increasing production, lead Dodge Brothers to believe that the last six months of 1923 added to the record-breaking first six months will total by far the greatest year in the history of their business.

THE SAME IN WINONA

Winona Residents Speak Out for the Welfare of the Public.

It is just the same in Winona as here in Grenada; our friends there speak our in the same glad, earnest way as so many grateful Grenada men and women have spoken in these columns for years past.

Lem Thompson, foreman, Cotton Mill, Winona, Miss., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are a great kidney medicine. Several years ago I was working at the carpenter trade and I believe the straining caused kidney trouble. My kidneys were weak and annoyed me day and night. The heavy dull ache across my back and hips was a great annoyance, making it difficult for me to move. After giving Doan's Kidney Pills a fair test, I found they were just as they had been recommended. My cure has stood the test of several years. It is seldom that I take Doan's now only when I think it advisable to flush my kidneys."

Why Have Rheumatism

The cures of Rheumatism made by Leonardi's Blood Elixir have been called modern miracles by those who have seen the seemingly impossible cures this wonderful remedy has made.

Rheumatism is a disease of the blood and cannot be cured as long as any rheumatic poison is in the veins. Leonardi's Blood Elixir from the first dose begins to drive from the blood every particle of uric acid and other poisonous impurities that cause Rheumatism. It makes and increases rich, red blood and in this way gives new life and vigor to the system. For old folks this remedy is especially valuable, restoring their energy and vitality and building up health and strength. In chronic cases of Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofulous affections, Blood Poison, Ulcers and other diseases of the blood, Leonardi's Blood Elixir is a specific.

LECTURES THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN ON THE FIRING LINE.

In another column in this issue we are reproducing an editorial from the Commercial Dispatch of Columbus, of June 24, under the caption "They Are Sick and Tired of It," in which the esteemed editor of that paper administers a lecture, in his advocacy of the election of Prof. Whitfield, to those Democrats in Mississippi who have been in the thick of the fight against all the isms and demagoguery which have afflicted Mississippi during the past few years.

The Commercial Dispatch editor specially singles the editor of this paper out for applauding Mike Conner's efforts in showing the Russell administration up, and in giving the people of Mississippi the inside facts about what is going on now and what has been going on for eight years past.

We have a profound respect for our friend Barney Imes, who edits the Commercial Dispatch. He is a lovable fellow. But if Barney had not been practically sitting on the fence for these years watching the battle from afar, we might lend a more attentive ear to his plea now.

Where was Barney when the Bilbo-Reily campaign of 1915 was on? We are really asking for information. If Barney lent his influence; if his pen or any newspaper with which he was connected said anything in that campaign, it was in behalf of Theodore, if our memory serves us aright (?) Certainly he was in no sense recognized as one trying to save the State from Bilbo.

Where was Barney and his influence in the senatorial campaign of 1918?

Where, oh where, was Barney and his newspaper in the late campaign of 1919, when a political degenerate was swashbuckling the State in the campaign for Governor?

We repeat, we are asking for information. Sure we are that the rank and file who have borne the brunt of the battle against a lot of political harlots never thought they even heard one encouraging word from the Columbus Dispatch editor.

Just somehow we have gained the impression that those largely interested with Barney when he purchased the Commercial Dispatch were Bilbo-Russellites and that their affiliations in Lowndes County had long been with that gang (?) If so, then possibly Barney feels that he must soft pedal (?)

Suppose all the Democrats had done like Barney and his newspaper associates, where, oh where, would Mississippi's name have been today? Instead of the almost complete redemption which we are now experiencing, a puking buzzard would have taken the place of the eagle on the dome of the Capitol building; skunks would have been doing the night watching there; bats would have displaced the pigeons and the foul odors emanating from the Insane Hospital, where a mockery was made of chastity, the poor unfortunate neglected and harlots placed upon pedestals by those high in official authority, would have been scattered over the State to wither and blight that which is holy, sweetest and best; Birkhead seduction suits, Goldsby pardons and scandalous other political and official acts would have been pressed down upon the brow of proud Mississippians until they would have cried out to the mountains, "hide us from further humiliation and shame."

But thanks to "Him who rules above and guides below," there have been those who have seized the torch and who have never faltered in the hour of the State's sorest travail.

And yet we are met with the preachment that all this must be forgotten. Those who have given of their talents, their time and almost their very life's blood are told to "Hush, say no more or you will wound the buccaneers which you have routed; go way back and sit down, you who have fought the good fight. The enemy is on the run now, you hush while those who sat upon the fence feast at the banquet table." That is the logic of Barney Imes.

Surely the Commercial Dispatch's candidate has never stood for that sort of a thing. If he does today, it is simply because he is in an untried field and because he has been told it is expedient.

Our method is to fight in the open. Tell the truth. Mean what you say and do what you say, acting always with malice towards none. We have fought for what we believed to be best for Mississippi. We have stood for a principle. We have nothing to take back. Perish the thought that there is any statesmanship in any method that is nourished by a mistaken or sickly sentimentality. Without in the least intending to be sacrilegious, we are reminded that the Savior showed no "hush" sentiment when he ran out those who were polluting the Temple.

We repeat that if our talented and good friend Barney Imes had ever been in the thick of any fight against the gang that have written political shame and debauchery across the brow of Mississippi, we might think that he was in a position to give advice to those who show the scars of many battles, and we might be ready to give attentive ears and a faithful breast to his soft words.

In the name of his candidate, for whom we have a warm personal regard and whom we hold in high esteem, we repudiate Barney Imes' position. We are sure that that gentleman will not dare go forth as an apologist; but rather are we confident that he will claim to be a crusader and to show the scars of many battles (?)

For things as some "others see them," we respectfully refer our friend Imes to the editorials of the Batesville Panolian and the Senatobia Democrat, which we are reproducing in The Sentinel of this week.

Barney needs to tarry in Jericho before qualifying as an expert on giving advice.

A CORRECTION.

Some weeks ago we made some editorial observations about certain matter sent us by the Mississippi Development Board whose domicile is at Hattiesburg.

In brief we stated that inasmuch as the booklet which was sent us showed that it was printed in Chicago, our advice was that the Mississippi Development Board seek Chicago facilities for newspaper publicity. Since that time we have learned that the use of the booklet was merely accidental and that it was printed by the Government during the war. We are also advised that the Mississippi Development Board gets its printing done in Mississippi. We are glad to be able to make this correction. We are glad that the Development Board realizes that if it wants to use the Mississippi newspapers' space that it must remember the newspaper when it needs commercial printing. There are others that need to learn this lesson. But the newspaper is learning to tell those where to head in who have their commercial printing done at one place and then want to use its columns for publicity.

Some of the best citizens and most prominent and successful business men in central and south Mississippi constitute the Mississippi Development Board and we are sure that they are trying to do their best to bring about better business conditions in Mississippi.

C. A. NEIL OF CARROLLTON

We have no disposition to butt in on the politics of a sister county, but we feel that we can hardly refrain from saying that Carroll County will be acting wisely and doing that which is best for its public school interests in every way, if she will elect C. A. Neil, editor of the Conservative, County Superintendent of Education. In saying this we are not intending to reflect in the least on the other worthy and competent ones seeking the office, but Mr. Neil has served in that capacity before, and he would go into the office fortified by his past experience. His work as a newspaper man has still further enlarged his vision and added to his equipment. He is a high class man in every way and worthy of every confidence. We repeat, Carroll County will display splendid judgment if she will name him for the general director of her public schools.

Indifference has wrought more wreck and disaster in the world than differences.

THE COUNTRY WEEKLY.

Looking over the pages of the country weeklies that come to our desk, we note with regret a tendency on the part of many editors to exclude from their columns any editorial expression whatever. This should not be.

We believe that our criticism will be received in the same kindly spirit in which it is made, when we say the editor owes more to his readers than the mere chronicling of current news events, interesting though they may be.

The country editor is in position to materially aid his community by giving the people benefit of the ideas he gets from the exchange table and elsewhere. Frequently he reads of a movement in another town that will suggest to him something along similar lines that would make his own town a better place in which to live.

Of couse, some of the people will disagree with him at all times, and all of the people will disagree with him some times, but if he is sincere, practical and courageous, most of the people will co-operate with him at all times.

The editor of the country weekly should give his paper a personal touch by making the editorial columns reflect his opinions of men in public life and their fitness to serve in the offices for which they offer. His views on projects and happennngs, always would be of interest to his readers.

Editorial pages of some of the weeklies on our exchange list show that the editors put much thought in their work. Often we find a thought or suggestion so pertinent or an editorial so clarifying in its bearing on present day problems that we borrow it for reproduction, giving due credit.

Twenty-five years ago there were few weeklies that did not have strong editorial pages. There were some gifted men in charge, men who left their impress not only on the minds of those about them, but whose influence practically knew no bounds.

There are strong men at the head of many of our country weeklies today, as proven by the editorial columns. Too many editors, however, seem content to print local and general news and advertisements, feeing perhaps that their readers are not interested in their views. They are mistaken, and a couple of columns of editorial each week for a month will convince them.

There will always be a field for the country weekly, and we hope the editors will be content to give their readers nothing of less value than the best they've got.—Commercial Appeal.

While the State is talking politics, some very important things are being neglected. The people rave and rant about certain things, which happen after men get into office and maybe the tax levy touches them pointedly, but all these things they seem to forget or overlook while election time is on.

If men would honor God day by day and try to make it a point every day to say something in the Master's name, we would lead a remarkably different life and things would be so much smoother in every community.

The more men realize that the Bible statement is correct, "A soft answer turneth away wrath but grievous words stir up anger," the less they will have to be sorry for and the more joy they will get out of living.

A great many things enter into what is termed happiness, but the briefest prescription for real happiness is, 'do unto others as you would have them do unto you.'

DULWEBER'S FLAG DAY SPEECH

Before Kiwanis Club at Greenwood.

The following speech was delivered before the Kiwanis Club at Greenwood on Flag Day by Mr. B. F. Dulweber, president of the Kraetzer-Cured Lumber Co., and an esteemed friend of the Editor of The Sentinel. Mr. Dulwebber has one big plant at LeFlore, this County, and he is one of the leading business factors of this part of the State.

It is well that attention is directed to the U. S. flag, "Old Gory," that floats over the home of the free and of the brave. Had more attention been given to the meaning of the flag and all the patriotic feelings and impulses that naturally go with it, this country would be upon higher ground and there would be less rancor and discontent in certain quarters:

"We gather here today, my friends, to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of our flag—the stars and stripes.

"The present design of the American flag was adopted by Congress April 14th, 1818, but the original flag, embodying the use of the stars and stripes became the national emblem by act of the Continental Congress on June 14th, 1777, so that this is the 146th birthday of the national emblem.

"Prior to the adoption of the present emblem, many different flags were used during the early Revolutionary war period. The Pine Tree flag having a red field with a green pine tree in the upper corner was in use for same years and was carried by the Continental army at Bunker Hill. The latter part of 1775 the Continental Congress appointed a committee to consider a single emblem for the thirteen colonies then in revolt against Great Britain. This committee recommended a design of thirteen alternate stripes of red and white, representing the thirteen colonies, with an azure field in the upper corner, bearing the red and the white crosses of St. Andrew. This flag was first hoisted on a ship in the Delaware river on December 3rd, 1775 by John Paul Jones. A month later it was raised over Washington's headquarters, then at Cambridge, Mass., 'in compliment,' as he wrote, 'to the United Colonies.' It was the first American flag to receive a foreign salute. As we participate in this celebration, let us for a moment ponder and dwell on the meaning of this flag and what it represents. Let us consider the motives and purposes of those gallant forefathers who bled and died and sacrificed their all that this glorious heritage might be ours, and let our hearts be filled with reverence, love and devotion for that flag, and loyalty to the country it represents. That flag stands for tolerance, for the true brotherhood of man, for freedom of thought, for equal opportunity to all, for government of the people, by the people, not as some mistake that term by direct action or mob rule—but through representation.

"No students of history can doubt that the founders of our government builded wisely and soundly. Their preparation for the great task that lay before them was the oppression by Great Britain during the Colonial days, the terrible sacrifices, hardships and sufferings of the war of the revolution, the chaos following the revolutionary war due to lack of organization and to the then popular theory of government by direct action, which almost robbed the gallant people of the fruits of the victory they had endured so much to win, and the close study of the history of other nations, the forms of government that had succeeded and those that had failed, and the reasons for those failures and successes.

"No people ever suffered more, endured more. Experiment after experiment in government failed, and to many it doubtless appeared that they had, at the tremendous cost of blood and life and all of their earthly possessions, thrown off the yoke of oppression only to be left to a still worse fate. The situation, except for the greater intelligence and better education of the people, was not unlike that which existed in Russia following the overthrow of the Czar.

"But those wonderful, courageous, self-sacrificing men, Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, Hamilton, Madison and the many others that lived in that day, were not to be denied. They were resolved that the sacrifices of their country, their people, should not be in vain, and they proceeded to lay the foundation of a government that would turn chaos into orderly progress.

"They profited by their mistakes, by their failures at attempted self government. They studied the history of other nations, not superficially as perhaps some of us would read history today, but with deep concentration and thoroughness, and this preparation, combined with a sense of responsibility, a seriousness and determination that is perhaps unequaled in the history of the world, resulted in the foundation of a government that has become the greatest the world has ever known.

"The drafting of the Constitution, under which this government functions, was not easily accomplished. It is an accomplishment that is possible only to men with a thorough knowledge of their subject, with the keenest sense of their duty and responsibility, with a definite purpose in mind and a determination such as is born only of absolute necessity. There were probably more inspiring scenes in the Constitutional convention, which gave us the government, which is represented by that flag, than have occurred in any other period of history, save only perhaps, that period Christ was on the earth.

"Many weary months were spent in the accomplishment of this great work (I am ashamed to say that I do not now recall the exact period of time that was required) and many times the task seemed hopeless and the effort doomed to failure. At one period, after they had been in session for a long time without accomplishing anything, and they were about to adjourn and abandon the great purpose for which they had met, George Washington, who was presiding, knowing that such course meant the surrender of all his hopes and dreams of everything that was dear to him, arose, and, with his face white with anxiety, unable to utter a word, mutely appealed to Benjamin Franklin, then 82 years of age, but posterity and that old philosopher and statesman arose and addressed the chair as follows:

"'In this situation, this assembly groping as it were, in the dark, to find political truth, and scarcely able to distinguish it when presented to us, how has it happened, sir, that we have not hitherto once thought of humbly appealing to the Father of Lights to illuminate our understanding? I have lived, sir, a long time, and the longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can arise without His aid? We have been assured, sir, in the Sacred Writings, that 'except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that built it.' I firmly believe this; and I also believe that without His concurring aid we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel.'

"Here we have, my friends, a fine example of the spirit and the seriousness and determination that dominated that convention, and who is there amongst us, knowing the results as we do of their work, the glorious nation that was then given birth, can doubt that God answered that prayer, and that through the medium of those men there assembled, gave us the blessings we now enjoy?

"Without the work of these men, that flag would be meaningless; it

"I had very severe attacks of indigestion," writes Mr. M. H. Wade, a farmer, of R. F. D. 1, Weir, Miss. "I would suffer for months at a time. CHILDREN'S DAY AT SPARTA.

A Beautiful Service. Dinner on the Ground. Great Day.

On last Sunday the Editor of this paper in company with three friends from Grenada went out to Sparta church where "Children's Day" was observed.

The house was filled. Many had to stand during the services. The children did well. Each one and all of them had their parts well in mind and well did they execute them. The readings and the songs were of a character to stir the soul and to implant hopes and aspirations for the nobler and better things of life. "Old time" songs such as "On Jordan's Stormy Banks I Stand" were sung. One of the girls sang most beautifully, "Make Me a Child Just for Tonight." The whole program reflected most favorably on the young lady. Miss Garver, who trained and drilled the children.

After the morning services were concluded, an exegant dinner was spread under the shades of the trees and the big congregation was amply fed. There was just everything in the way of delightful edibles that one finds only in the country.

One could but take consolation, when taking a reflective view of the congregation and the services, that the best was still asserting itself and that there need be no apprehensions about direful consequences so long as the country people gather as they gathered that day to worship God and to teach the young in the ways of beauty and holiness. The day reflected well on the good people of the Sparta community.

After the dinner was over, the congregation assembled once again in the church where the beloved pastor was to preach. Preceding the sermon, Mr. C. C. White of Grenada and the Editor of The Sentinel were called upon and both made short talks in which they sought to hold up the riches of Christ.

Candidate for

State Revenue Agent

Advocating It Be Placed on Limited Salary Basis

I advocate "That the salary of the State Revenue Agent shall not exceed $5,000 per annum in full compensation for his services to be paid in the following manner:

Out of the 20 per cent commission allowed by law, to such Revenue Agent, he shall pay all the expenses of his office and attorneys fees, and retain a sum not to exceed $5,000 per annum for his salary and the balance of such commissions he shall pay into the State Treasury and make detailed itemized report to each session of the legislature as to the said account."

I favor a law providing for an annual audit of the accounts of all State officers, including the State Revenue Agent; in fact, such a law as was incorporated in House Bill No. 989, which was introduced at the last session of the Legislature and passed both Houses, and was vetoed by the Governor for the alleged reason that it might interfere with a suit then pending that the Revenue Agent had filed against the Insurance Commissioner. If such a bill is introduced during my encumbency as State Revenue Agent, I will not lobby, or cause it to be done, against its passage, but will give it every honorable and commendable support within my power.

I will not permit the State Revenue Agent's office to become a political asset to the Governor's office.

Should I secure judgment in the Courts against any tax-dodger, I will not thereafter consent to, or permit, a compromise settlement with the said tax-dodger for a less amount than called for in said judgment, for in so doing, I would be establishing a precedent equivalent to inviting the tax-dodger and others so inclined to withhold the payment of their taxes according to law in order that they might be sued and afterwards make a compromise settlement with the Revenue Agent, and thereby sweeten the commissions of the Revenue Agent, and at the same time, withhold a portion of their rightful taxes due the State of Mississippi.

I will not send my deputies to the various counties of the State to harrass, intimidate and terrorize honest, peaceful and patriotic farmers, who happen to have upon their limited land areas, a few trees suitable and necessary for boards, fence-posts and building material, required for the successful maintenance of their farms, and endeavor to extort from them through the strong arm of the law, back taxes on their said limited timber holdings. It is my opinion that while a literal interpretation of the law affecting timber taxes would justify, possibly, the collection of such taxes, it is not the spirit of the law, nor was it ever intended by the law-makers that such collections should be made.

Under my administration, should any Legislative Committee during my term of office, report that a half-million dollars, more or less, has been over paid to any individual or corporation by any Department, Appointive Board, or Commission of the State, and further report, that suit could be brought by the State Revenue Agent for the recovery of this overpaid money, I will immediately enter suit to retrieve for the State the amount unlawfully so expended. Should I discover such a practice, otherwise, than through a report of a Legislative Committee, I will immediately enter suit to reclaim the unlawful expenditure, for I maintain that no faithful official in such a case needs instructions from the Legislature.

I propose to administer the affairs of the State Revenue Office in accordance with constructive principles rather than destructive.

Nor will I be a party to the building of a Political Dynasty out of the spoils wrung from the Tax-Dodger, "Trusts and Combines," so that I may hold in the hollow of my hand the Destiny of my State and have Governors, Attorney-Generals, Tax Commissioners, Levee Boards and Legislators follow my imperious will like the helianthus that ever turns its head to the sun, or like the day that follows the night.

Under my administration, the office of Revenue Agent shall assume an endless series of friendly gestures toward inviting capital to enter our domain unafraid of anything but to do wrong, fully protected from improper molestation, and, incidentally, to help to develop the State industrially, and thereby increase our taxable value.

In agreeing to accept the State Revenue Office on a compensation basis, not to exceed $5,000.00 per year, I feel that I need no additional incentive in the matter of salary, to make me faithfully discharge the duties of the office, and if elected, I pledge myself to be as diligent in the performance of such duties, as alert and assiduous in carrying out the oath of office, and as aggressive and uncompromising in securing legitimate withheld revenue, as if I received the full 20 per cent of all collected, which full 20 per cent, for the year 1921, was more than $75,000.00.

Respectfully,

W. J. MILLER.

MRS. HIRAM WEST PASSES AWAY

The death angel came to the home of Mr. Hiram C. West in Grenada last Saturday afternoon and bore away the spirit of his wife to that land from whence no traveler has ever returned, yet man looks with a sort of unrest and longing for that abode which he knows by faith is just as real as anything earthly.

Mrs. West had been ill since last October. Some weeks ago she was carried to Memphis for an operation, but after the surgeon's knife had been applied, it was learned that an operation would be useless and that a further use of the knife might prove fatal. So she was brought back home to pass her last days in the sweet recluse of her own household.

In the years ago she had accepted Christ and with His blood she believed her "name was written there." so she bore up beautifully and meekly expressed herself as ready for the hour that she should leave the earthly home for that place of many mansions.

She was a good woman. She was quiet and unostentatious of manner. She believed that she could do her greatest work under her own roof. yet she did not deny herself the privilege and opportunity of taking part in those things which she regarded as ordained of God and where she thought duty called.

She was a faithful and devoted wife and a good mother, and when that is said, is it not the very highest tribute that could be paid a woman?

Mrs. West is survived by her husband and three children, Mrs. M. H. Mabry, and Maude and Hiram C. West, Jr.

Mr and Mrs. West were married March 14, 1900. She was Miss Cora Irby prior to her marriage, being the daughter of Mr. Joe and Mrs. Mary Irby.

The funeral services were conducted Sunday morning from the residence by her pastor, Rev. Mellville Johnson of the Methodist church, after which the remains were carried to Odd Fellows' cemetery and there laid away in that beautiful city of the dead to await the dispensation of God's judgment.

To the grief stricken and sorrowing, The Sentinel tenders sincerest sympathy.

BOYS AT GREENWOOD GET WORK ON FARM

The following from the Greenwood Commonwealth gives an instance of "town boys" seeking to help in the cotton and cotton fields and of finding work and doing it. These boys furnish an example that might well be emulated by many other boys about the towns who find themselves with "nothing to do" except to car ride now that "school is out:"

"Three fine boys of this city, Allen Bledsoe, Mack Kimball and Shack Smith, not wanting to idle away their vacation, are hard at work, farming on the Bledsoe plantation at Shellmound. They are making $1.50 per day, room and board and seem perfectly happy and well content with farm life.

"These boys are certainly to be commended on having planned so wisely their vacation employment. It is just such boys as these that make good in the world and really amount to something."

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank our friends for the many acts of kindness and expressions of love for our dear wife and mother, and for the beautiful flowers.

H. C. WEST,
MAUDE WEST,

stop the defection and to brace up his cause.

There can be no question that the news is coming from every section of the State that Whitfield is not as strong now as a month ago and that Conner is much stronger. Conner's friends claim that his rapid development of strength is because of his appealing sincerity, and for the still further reason that he has been so vigorous in fighting Lee Russell and showing up the delinquencies of the present administration. Hundreds of letters, it is stated at Conner's campaign headquarters, have come in within the past few days from the northeast section of the State showing that Conner's tour of that section last week and the early part of this week made him thousands of votes.

Opinions vary widely as to Bilbo and Franklin. One man puts it that what few of that faction are about the towns are for Franklin but that Bilbo will get those "back in the woods;" any way it looks very much like at times they will destroy each other. Those regarded as the better guessers figure that Franklin will pull through in the final lap ahead of Bilbo and with enough votes to put him in the second primary.

There seems to be little question that Franklin would have fared better had Gov. Russell not butted in on him, still there are many who say that Franklin is doing the very foolish thing of defending Russell in his speeches, and that "Too much Lee Russell has made Mississippi sick already."

There is this one feature about the fight that makes Conner stand out separate from the other candidates and that is that they have all fought him. He has been the object of more shafts and of more misrepresentation than any man in the race and this very fact is construed by many close observers as making all the candidates recognize Conner as a sure shot for the second primary. A poll of the grand jury here in the city of Jackson just the other day showed 11 votes for Conner and only 6 votes for the other four candidates.

probably would not now exist. What they accomplished is what that flag represents, and still how many of us ever give thought to their wonderful work? How many of us really know what our government is? How many of us, perhaps without preparation, without any qualification, without any deep study of the rise and fall of other nations, are only too ready to criticize their work and grasp at some political theory, long since exploded and proven, time after time, hundreds and even thousands of years ago through the decline and fall of other great nations to be impracticable.

"In some part of our country today we have vast populations which know nothing of our system of government, which are misled by radicals, seeking to further their own selfish ends, teaching doctrines in conflict with true Americanism and exciting class and radical prejudices that threaten to undermine the great nation we have builded.

"In our section of the country we are not troubled with people of this type, but I fear that our sin is even greater. I refer to the indifference, our apathy. We have not the excuse of lack of intelligence. We may loudly proclaim our loyalty to that flag, but that is an empty proclamation, one of mere words, unless we know what that flag stands for, and we cannot know that, unless we become thorough students of history and familiarize ourselves with the sacrifices made by our forefathers and the great work which they wrought of which we are now reaping the benefit.

"Let us resolve:

"(1) To teach the foreign population assembled in certain parts of our country the true meaning of that flag. Let us acquaint them with our form of government. Show them that under this form of government this nation has progressed as no other nation has ever done in all the history of the world. Let us show them what glorious opportunities await every man, woman and child under the protection of that government. Tell them the story of Lincoln, who from the most abject poverty, rose to the presidency of the United States. Of James A. Garfield, who from a ragged barefoot boy, employed as a mule driver on the tow path of the Erie Canal, also rose to the presidency, of the many other thousands, yes hundreds of thousands, of men who came from the bottom and went to the top. Such things are possible only in this country, under the form of government created by the Constitutional Convention to which I have referred. These people so lately come to our shores are disloyal only through ignorance. If we teach them what this government is, if we wipe out class, racial, religious and other prejudices, and acquaint them with the oppotunities that only our government can give, they will be as anxious for the preservation of that government and that flag as any of us.

"(2) Let us better inform ourselves regarding these matters and particularly encourage their study in our schools and most important of all let us not lightly regard the wonderful heritage that has come down to us. Let us revere the work of the founders of our government who sacrificed and suffered so much, who worked so earnestly for our good and not depart from the fundamentals of the government which they laid down for us and upon which is built the most wonderful national progress of all time.

"And as we gaze upon that flag, gracefully unfurled by the gentle breeze, kissed by the glorious sunlight sent from on high, let us be impressed, not with the symmetrical beauty of the design ,or the flashing colors, but with the meaning of that our memory those who, with the will flag, and let us ever keep fresh in our memory those who, with the will of God, made that flag the symbol of liberty, of tolerance, of brotherly love, of equal opportunity to all. And let us repeat this story again and again, and still again to our children and our children's children, that our progress may continue and that the structure built upon that foundation of wisdom, patience, untiring effort and divine guidance, may ever endure and grow stronger year by year."
